The diagram illustrates two separate small entity tables, each consisting of a header row and four data rows. The header row contains two columns: "RATE ($)" and "FEE ($)". In the first table, a curved arrow originates from the "FEE ($)" column of the second data row and points to the "X" column of the third data row. In the second table, a curved arrow originates from the "RATE ($)" column of the second data row and points to the "X" column of the third data row. Both tables have an "OR" label positioned between their respective second and third data rows.
